

ARCH FOR COMMERCIAL LINES UNDERWRITERS

What's important to you

Underwriters carry out a great deal of work in assessing the risks inherent in a policy. Much of this work is based on expertise and experience overlaid on their company's pre-determined process.

There tends to be very little automation which means that consistency of underwriting is a challenge and the ability to triage based on anything beyond business activity is limited.

How can ARCH help?

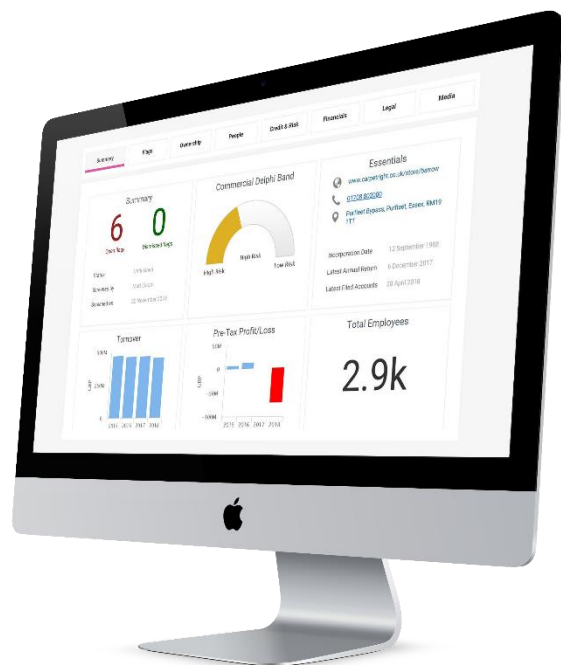

ARCH is a service for enabling commercial teams and underwriters to carry out an automated risk screen on a prospective client in order to quickly assess the structured and unstructured data sources available for a business.

ARCH utilises the same company structure and financial data that the underwriters currently check and also interrogates all the unstructured media available, categorises it and assesses it for risks.

It then applies the insurer's own policies to that data in order to present a summarised view of risks to the underwriter.

ARCH draws attention to any potential issues and areas for further investigation, with very clear flags.

With all that data aggregated into one place, ARCH can now pre-populate the quotation process, as appropriate.

ARCH also enables segmentation based upon risks for renewals on an automated basis so that valuable underwriting resources are utilised on the policies where they are most needed.

Benefits to Insurers

With ARCH, Insurers can make decisions faster; they can improve their ability to segment risks effectively; they can improve both their clients' and distributors' customer experience and they can reduce their operating costs.
